THURSDAY 18 NOVEMBER 2010 MANCHESTER CONFERENCE CENTRE, MANCHESTER

Workshop

14.00-15.30

Developing effective Clinical Audit for Junior Doctors

Facilitator:
Stephen Ashmore

Director

The Clinical Audit Support Centre

- back to basics: what a good Clinical Audit should include
- demonstrating that the audit makes a difference to patient care and practice
- audit for assurance v audit for improvement
- publishing and presenting Clinical Audit projects and findings
- evaluating the impact: examples of excellence in Junior Doctor Clinical Audit

Interactive discussion with Junior Doctors and tips for success in delivering effective Junior Doctor led Clinical Audit

This one day conference focuses on improving the quality of Junior Doctor led Clinical Audit and the role that Clinical Audit Teams and Consultants play in supporting the delivery of Junior Doctor led Clinical Audit.

"All junior doctors, at the present time, have to complete a clinical audit. This has to be done over a very short period of time and has to be their own work. Much audit produced by junior doctors does not help them to develop good audit skills as they do not complete the clinical cycle. The impact it has on patients care or the strategic purposes of the departments they are working within often negligible. Re-audit seldom occurs due to doctors moving on to the next placement."

HQIP, PRODUCT PROCUREMENT SPECIFICATIONS, NOVEMBER 2009

Chairman, Yasmin Ahmed Little Specialty Registrar Public Health NHS Northwest opens the conference with a presentation on improving Junior Doctor Clinical Audit with a focus on the Junior Doctor perspective and overcoming the problem of delivering full audit projects within Junior Doctor turnaround times. The morning continues with presentations on supporting junior Doctors to deliver effective Clinical Audit projects that lead to change and improvement, and overcoming the problem of Junior Doctor turnaround.

Dr Makani Purva Consultant Anaesthetist Clinical Audit Lead and Deputy Director of Medical Education Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals NHS Trust will deliver a session on training and educating Junior Doctors in Clinical Audit practice and will discuss developing a Clinical Audit training programme, empowering Junior Doctors to take an active interest in Clinical Audit and coordinating Junior Doctor Clinical Audit activity across the organisation.

"There is imaginative work going on in some NHS trusts. In some organisations, good management by senior clinicians and clinical audit departments has led to systems and processes, including clinical supervision, that enables junior doctor's clinical audits to deliver useful results, lead to real changes in patient care, improve the skills and confidence of junior doctors in clinical audit and ensure that the individuals concerned understands the value of both clinical audit and meeting the strategic objectives of the organisation."

HQIP, PRODUCT PROCUREMENT SPECIFICATIONS, NOVEMBER 2009

The afternoon incorporates an interactive workshop facilitated by the Stephen Ashmore Director The Clinical Audit Support Centre. The workshop allows Junior Doctors to gain advice and guidance on the basics of Clinical Audit and what a good Clinical Audit should include and demonstrating that Clinical Audit makes a difference to patient care and practice.

The conference concludes with case study sessions of 20 minute perspectives and good practice examples of Junior Doctor led Clinical Audit and a presentation from Shree Datta Chair The Junior Doctors Committee The British Medical Association, who will discuss Junior Doctor Clinical Audit moving forward.
