

Leicestershire Partnership
NHS Trust

HEATHER DARLOW

Head of Clinical Quality and
Governance
Leicestershire Partnership Trust

I started working in clinical audit in: 1994

I became involved in audit because: It was demanded of me in my first role in the NHS as an administrative assistant in intensive care at Great Ormond Street Hospital and it involved a lot of manual data collection – was always fascinated with the ‘so what’ afterwards.

What I love about clinical audit is: It is a system for improving standards of clinical practice and patient care, supported by best practice and a need to collaborate and work together, that leads to improvement. What isn't there to love?!

My top audit tip is: Always engage others in the audit process and spend the time needed to plan and prepare properly, only then will you have buy in for change later down the line.

